DEGREES THAT SAVE LIVES

The Herzing University healthcare services programs were developed with professional input to prepare you for entry and advancement to the growing healthcare field. Combining healthcare, business, management and technology in practical ways, Herzing's healthcare services programs blend theory with hands-on training for careers in medical assisting, office administration, insurance billing and coding and healthcare management. With a unique focus on practical problem solving, management and leadership skills, a Herzing healthcare degree can prepare you to make a difference across the healthcare field.

AS A HERZING HEALTHCARE STUDENT, YOU'LL GAIN:

PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE

The healthcare field continues to grow as information, records, processes and operations become increasingly complex and digitized. Employers want professionals with relevant experience who can contribute on day one. Herzing students learn how to apply theory to problem solving, management, and practice from instructors with real world experience. You'll gain a practical understanding of the constantly changing healthcare environment, importance of leveraging technology and information to support an organization; and the key skills of leadership and critical thinking that are essential to management.

DEGREE PATHWAYS

You have choices. No matter your skill level, Herzing has a degree program that can help you achieve your healthcare career goals. For example, you can start in medical office administration, then seek a medical assisting or medical billing degree and finally advance to healthcare management or health information management.

Earn your bachelor's in as few as three years and your associate degree in two years. Talk with an advisor to determine your path.

“Herzing provided the classes and education so that I can better myself in the job I have, or pursue a better job. Having this type of degree will only enhance my skills in this field.”
